CARCHESS & CANABY,-On Main street, Wheeling, lives one of our most ad citizens, who loves little child-full of fun himself, and a great ren, is full of hin himself, and a greathand for pets. A canary bird, one as complete in the different qualifications of beauty, music, sprightliness and mirth as any in the city, has for many days past been loitering about the trees in the vicinity of our friend's residence, during e which time he has used force, stratagem and kindness in his efforts to secure the beharming singer, but all in vain, up to it Tuesday evening, when his attempt was crowned with success.

As Brown (that is what we will be the complete of the property of the complete of the

Tuesday evening, when his attempt was recovened with success.

As Brown (that is what we will call him was mounting the steps to his dwelling, he noticed the songster scated quietly on the upper landing picking its plumage and in other waystrying to drive dull care away. He didn't tell his wife to bring out the salt-cellars and in this well-known way outflank the bird; but he desployed his hands on either side of the bird and made a quick, decisive dash, but in an instant the canary was down on the pavement, singing—he was close enough to put salt on, and then came the second dash. When Brown got a fush bits of loose skin drawn from his knuckles, the songster sat on the next corner singing sweetly "That's the way the monkey goes, Fop goes the weasel."

Just as Brown reached a distance from which he could have knocked the feathered eff into puradise with a fish pole, it dodged him the third time, and moving off with a hop-skip-and-a-jump, caroled tauntingly:

"And if you want to save your wisd, You'd stop, you better bad."

This advice had no further influence upon Brown than to inspire him in the chase; so he rushed down street in hor pursuit. Small boys dashed out of front doors, and forsook their "nicks" and base ball, and entered the race. Others patted their heles on the curbstones, and shook their hats on high, vociferating, "go it little fraid or big fraid will catteh you." A two hundred and ten pound bundle of respectability and wealth in eager pursuit of an ounce and a half canary bird is a sight well calculated to tempt a fellow out of the tomb to see, and naturally enough its effect on the living was irrely day."

of the tomb to see, and naturally ugh its effect on the living was irreearly day.

On sped the estimable Mr. Brown, and on dashed the crowd of eager boys, while the dogs jumped about with joy and the window shutters flew open in every house, giving place to scores of heads, from the tow-domed infant up to the white hairs of good old age. For a time Mr. Brown glided along, coat tails horizontal, with the agility of a cat, but a small boy terminated his career in the chase by dashing in front of him just as he was making a "apurt." Both reached the ground simultaneously, and it was hard for the crowd as it rushed over them to distinguish which was the other. About five minutes afterwards Brown came limping up to the crowd with one knee exposed, and taking the bird from a small boy who had captured it, quietly remarked, "To the victor belongs the aprilie." To the reached the ground simultaneously, and taking the bird from a small boy who had captured it, quietly remarked, "To the remainder of the victor belongs the aprilie." A Bonz.—He was dressed in a has year's "plug" and other habiliments to match, and chewed plug tobacco. He stood on the rear platform of a down car and talked incessantly to the conductor about street cars and omnibuses. His knowledge of the private business of the different companies in the country was little less of the private business of the different companies in the country was little less than marvelous. His voice was of that harsh, grating, saw-filing, nerve-destroying kind that one hopes to hear but once in a lifetime, but must be heard once to be understood. It rose high above the din of the car, and permented every nook and corner. Horrible at first, it soon became exasperating. Instinctively passengers clutched at imaginary vespous and secretly reolved upon suicide or homicide, and still there was no "fet up' to him. At 24th and Chapline he got off the car, and every passenger involuntarily gave a sigh of relief, and inwardly thanked God that he was gone. "Oh, what a nuisance." exclaimed one lady, and everybody said "amen."
